THE BRAZEN HEAD

Authentic Irish Restaurant & Pub

The original Brazen Head is a 'living', authentic Irish pub, situated in the heart of medieval Dublin. To drink at The Brazen Head is to continue a proud tradition stretching back over 800 years. The Brazen Head is Ireland's oldest pub and combines all the essential features of a traditional Irish pub to create a truly unique atmosphere.

Dubliners were enjoying drinks in The Brazen Head a few hundred years before Christopher Columbus discovered America in 1492. The Brazen Head is also mentioned in James Joyce's "Ulysses". Ireland's famous literary son was known to drink there around the same time as Henry Ford was building his first motor car. The pub's history is interwoven with the Irish nationalist movement and the fight for independence, which eventually created the modern Irish State. Robert Emmet is reputed to have planned the uprising of 1803 with fellow nationalists in The Brazen Head in Dublin.

The Brazen Head offers the very best in food, traditional Irish music and craic.

"Over 800 Years of respectable drinking is celebrated at The Brazen Head".
